Are VMM Summer Camps Nut-Free and how do you take precautions for allergies?

No. While our summer camps are Nut-Aware and we ensure all provided food provisions do not contain nuts. The Vancouver Maritime Museum is not a Nut-free facility. We recognize that many camp participants have food and nut allergies. We are committed to providing a safe environment for all children; however, we do not describe our programs as being nut-free as we cannot guarantee that other camp participants or the public visiting the museum have not brought nuts or traces of nuts into our facilities. If your child has a food allergy, please make sure you send your child to camp with the appropriate medications such as their EpiPen, and our staff are made aware of their allergy.

Our Safety Precautions include:

- All snacks provided by VMM camps are nut-free.
- VMM Camps ask that guardians and caregivers exercise care when preparing their child(ren)'s lunches and snacks and carefully check labels to avoid sending products that contain nuts or traces of nuts.
- VMM Camps have a no-sharing policy, which means participants are strongly discouraged from sharing or trading snacks and lunches with other campers.
- VMM Camp staff members are trained in Standard First Aid and CPR-C and are trained to recognize the symptoms of an allergic reaction. WE DO NOT HAVE AN EPIPEN ON SITE AT THE MUSEUM. Please pack your child with their own EpiPen and/ or other medications should your child potentially require them.

Camp Activities and Spaces

What should we expect from camp and the type of activities campers will experience?

We have plenty of art activities planned for the day that will include lessons with learning objectives, crafts and mindfulness!

This is not a sports camp. While we will ensure a good balance of outside activity, we will dedicate most time during the day to calm art practices and observational learning.

To ensure the safety of all campers NO Swimming is permitted during camp hours. While campers will explore the shoreline and beaches, we do not allow any campers to go further than ankle-deep.

Is this an indoor or outdoor camp?

This is an outdoor and indoor camp; we have an indoor space (TK Gallery) we can use as needed. We do ask parents to come prepared for your child to be outside for most of the day, this includes if there is light rain. With heavy rain, extreme heat or other weather scenarios we will move the camp indoors.

Where will we be exploring?

Camp takes place primarily inside the museum. Additionally, we plan to bring campers to the Vanier Park shorelines, this could include Hadden Beach, Heritage Harbour, or Teatotaler Beach (weather depending).

Will camps be affected or cancelled due to weather?

Yes. If there is a power outage or an extreme weather warning issued in the City of Vancouver and Lower Mainland, VMM will monitor the warning, make necessary changes, and keep guardians informed. These potential changes include cancellations of activities, providing indoor activities, half-days of camp or camp cancellations. Any camp cancellations prior to the beginning of the camp day due to a power outage or extreme weather will result in a full refund. Staff will monitor the weather regularly and keep all staff informed of necessary actions.
